

First Ever Academic Psychology Forum

Psychology Notes is proud to be supporting what appears to be the first ever dedicated academic psychology forum for students of schools, colleges and universities. The forum is directed to students studying psychology at any level and accommodates all questions and guidance within the field of academic psychology.

Although the website is relatively new and has been online since July 2008, it has attracted several new active members within the first few weeks of it's launch, including college and university students. The forum also highly encourages those involved with teaching psychology to participate in assisting others in queries and engaging in general discussion with regards to this new science.

You can visit The Psychology Forum here.